How it "Progresses."

Satan would be ashamed of the conduct of the malignant meddlers with the colored people now who actually instigate them to stop the harvest on which whites and colored both depend for bread. Here are two illustrations: We understand the colored people in one part of Spotsylvania, formed an agreement to charge a high rate during harvest. One farmer declined to give that price and engaged a colored man for a smaller sum, who said if the others found out that he worked for less than the | may be found from 8 a, m., to 6 p. m , daily: regular rate, they would drive him out of the

A correspondent thus describes a scene at Westmoreland C. House: "A tall, slick black man made a long harangue, very incendiary, to but few auditors. He advised the colored people not to deal or make contracts with the whites. In the evening, some of his stripe threatened to go into a neighboring harvest field, and break the scythes of the cradlers there at work. It was denounced on the spot by the colored men present as unwise advice, for they said, "if we don't deal and work for whites, where are we to get money?" And the cradlers in the field said, "if they come among us with any such purpose we will cut them down with our seythes."—Fredericksburg

The principles of Mr. Stevens' bill chime in pondent of the New York Times from Lynchburg, "declares everywhere that the negroes intend to rule the South, and that, if necessary to insure its Africanization, will organize an immigration of negroes from Africa."-Another orator, according to the same authority, "declares that the negroes intend to have alongside of any manure he may apply.

The New York Tribune, naturally enough, squirms under the evident determination of the Phillips Radicals to have a black man on being far more durable in its effects. the next Radical Presidential ticket, for Vice President. It says the party have elected their candidates without black votes before, with its soluble bone phosphate of lime, cannot and can do it again, and besides that the black man don't want office. A WORD FOR THE NEWSPAPER CARRIER. of the news of the day, we think that the newspaper carrier is entitled to somewhat more consideration than he generally meets with at received from publishers if they should fail to issue their papers according to agreement, and the same regularity is expected from the carand in all kinds of weather, the newsmen leave their papers from door to door, and they come in for a liberal amount of censure if the expected sheet should not make its appearance. No allowances are made for unavoidable delays of any kind, and the labor of the carrier's vocation is scarcely appreciated. Most of them engaged in this business are faithful and honest, and for the disappointments which sometimes occur they are probably, in the majority of cases, not in the least to blame. While the subscribers have in reality but little occasion for fault-finding, the carriers are obliged to submit to frequent and serious annoyances. Their business is a laborious one, and it necessitates constant travel through the streets during the heat of summer and the cold of winter, through snow and slush, and in the midst of pouring rain. Every few weeks they are also obliged to go over their routes and collect from door to door for the money due them. The amounts charged upon their books are always small, but in the aggregate they make a considerable sum, which it is of much importance should be paid promptly.

These carriers are subjected to a great deal of trouble and annoyance from the difficulties they experience in obtaining the money that is owing to them. The very smallness of the sums due makes many persons careless and inattentive, and the carriers are frequently turned away from the doors of citizens without being able to obtain their pay. It generally happens that their calls are made during business hours, when the men of a family are away from home, and the lady of the house, if she does not happen to have the exact change, or if she does not feel disposed to go up stairs or into another apartment to get it, sends word to call again. The servant girls also very frequently tell the carriers that no one is at home, merely to avoid taking the trouble of calling the mistress. The consequence of this is that the distributor of papers has to take another tramp over his route for the purpose of collecting small sums of money, not amounting, in all probability, to more than twenty-five or fifty cents each. A great deal of this trouble arises out of pure thoughtlessness on the part of subscribers, and they think it a very trifling matter to refrain from promptly paying a debt of only a few cents. To the carriers, however, it is a very serious annoyance.
